The late Master Prior.

WE HAVE heard with regret of the death of Mr. PRIOR, one of the masters of the Chancery Division. For the last year or so the state of his health had necessitated frequent absence from work, and the recovery, which those who appeared before him hoped for, did not come. His conduct of business in the responsible office of master was marked by ability and courtesy, and he will be much missed. Mr. ARTHUR F. RIDSDALE, of the firm of Messrs. Ridsdale & Son, has been appointed to succeed him.

The Cause Lists.

THE MICHAELMAS cause lists shew 239 appeals, of which forty are from the Chancery Division, 154 from the King's Bench Division, and of the remainder, twenty-five are Workmen's Compensation cases. The total number is not so high as a year ago, when it was 270, but there were then seventy Workmen's Compensation Appeals; it is slightly higher than the total number at the beginning of the Trinity sittings, namely 217. The Chancery cause list shews 376 cases, besides sixty company matters. These are practically the same as the numbers last year, which were 389 and fifty-two. The King's Bench cause list contains 299 Divisional Court cases; 659 actions for trial; and eight appeals in Bankruptcy; together 966 causes. Last year it was 740; two years ago 1,120. The Probate, &c., Division has 622 causes, as against 508 a year ago.

The Judicial Time Table.

THE OBVIOUS moral of the King's Bench cause list is that the appointment of at least one additional judge is necessary, unless the arrears are to accumulate. It may be noticed that the practice of closing half the courts of the Chancery Division—possibly more—on Saturdays is to be continued. Of course the judges concerned give an extra half hour to court work on the other days of the week, though the manner in which this is done is not uniform. One judge sits from 10.15 to 4.15; the other two from 10.30 to 4.30. This variety does not tend to convenience, and it is a moot question whether the loss of Saturday is properly made up. We imagine the arrangement will not strengthen the case for an additional judge of the King's Bench Division.

The New King's Counsel.

THE Lord Chancellor has marked the commencement of the legal year by the creation of a large batch of King's Counsel. The following are their names and dates of call to the bar:—Mr. GEORGE EDWARD AUBERT ROSS, 1871; Mr. PATRICK ROSE-INNES, South-Eastern Circuit, 1878; Mr. EDGAR PERCY HEWITT, Chancery Bar, 1883; Mr. ROBERT F. COLAM, Recorder of Croydon, South-Eastern Circuit, 1884; Mr. HENRY HYMAN HALDINSTEIN, South-Eastern Circuit, 1886; Mr. HUGH MURRAY STURGES, Oxford Circuit, 1889; Mr. IVOR

BOWEN, South Wales and Chester Circuit, 1889; Mr. THOMAS FREDERIC DAWSON MILLER, Admiralty Court, North-Eastern Circuit, 1891; Mr. ERNEST EDWARD WILD, South-Eastern Circuit, 1893; Mr. WILLIAM HEPBURN COZENS-HARDY, Chancery Bar, 1893; Mr. HENRY ARTHUR COLEFAX, North-Eastern Circuit, 1894; Mr. JOHN ALBERT COMPTON, North-Eastern Circuit, 1895; Mr. RIGBY PHILIP WATSON SWIFT, M.P., 1895; Mr. JOSEPH HERBERT CUNLIFFE, Northern Circuit, 1896; Mr. WILLIAM LLEWELYN WILLIAMS, M.P., Recorder of Swansea, South Wales and Chester Circuit, 1897; Mr. LYNDEN L. MACASSEY, Parliamentary Bar, 1899; and Mr. GORDON HEWART, Northern Circuit, 1902.

The Appointment of K.C.'s.

THERE is one point in which a new occupant of the Wool-sack bears some resemblance to that Royal master whose conscience he is traditionally required to keep; his accession is usually celebrated by the appointment of a new group of King's Counsel. Lord HALDANE has followed precedent by adding seventeen names to the existing list of silk gownsmen, of whom there are 259: of these about three-fourths owe their dignity to Lord HALSBURY, and only some sixty or seventy to Lord LOREBURN. It is understood, however, that with one or two exceptions, all the existing recipients of the honour applied for it in the time of the late Chancellor; indeed, nearly 150 juniors have applied since the last creation in the autumn of 1910. Out of the seventeen there are only three Chancery and one Admiralty practitioner; the rest are members of the common law bar, but this somewhat artificial division reckons within the latter branch of practice a patent specialist, Mr. COLEFAX. Since work is, perhaps, not very unequally divided between the Temple and Lincoln's Inn, one asks why equity is so meagrely represented? Possibly the answer is, that it is a much more risky thing for a man to go within the bar if he practises before the Chancery judges. For unless a Chancery silk goes special, he is tied down to appearing before one particular judge; and usually, in each judge's court, there is one silk so securely entrenched that there is little or nothing left for his rivals. Every-one tries to brief the recognized leader who is generally supposed to command the ear of the court; and if the other side have stolen a march and got him first, then a "special" is brought in to redress the balance. This is one of the weak points of the present arrangements of the Chancery Division. Only when the leader in each court takes a judgeship or otherwise drops out, is there much chance for a new silk. Perhaps, too, fashionable juniors are tempted by another prospect to reject the silk favour. As a rule, nearly one half of the Chancery judges of first instance and appeal are promoted to the bench after filling the office of "Treasury devil" in Chancery; and on the equity side that office is not the reward of political services; any leading junior has a reasonable chance of securing it when a vacancy arrives. This solid path to the bench tends to outweigh, with all save the greatly ambitious, the more glorious uncertainty of a silk's career.

The Monopoly of Silk.

IT is worth while to notice in passing that the vexed question of "counsel's fees," their size and alleged excess, is not altogether unconnected with the number of king's counsel. The bar as a whole is so large, and the number of practitioners who get any work at all is relatively so small a percentage of the whole, that there is plenty of active competition ever present to keep down the amount of counsel's fees. But it might be plausibly contended that this is not so with the senior bar. Out of 250 silks we must write off about 150 or more as elderly men who have retired from practice, or members of Parliament who desire the dignity, but are not seriously bent on entering the forensic arena from within the bar. Of the remaining 80 or 100, a good many are soon found to be practically useless as leaders; they have been admirable pleaders or junior advocates, but have not the force and style which a king's counsel must exhibit in court if he wishes to get briefed. The result is that, except on the Chancery side, competition among leaders is really very limited. This is especially so on circuit, where there are often only two leaders still engaged in actual practice; the clients must take these, and the silks can afford to dictate a larger fee than would otherwise be obtained. Probably this accounts for the fact that, in common jury cases, the minimum fee for leaders, only ten guineas in London, is practically fifteen everywhere on circuit, except where a strong local bar is established. If this monopoly really exists, then it is bad both for the profession and the public; it ought to be abolished. To secure a "living wage" for king's counsel by limiting their numbers is sound neither in economics nor in practical life. Indeed, there is much to be said for the view, which is often advanced by members of the common law bar, that every reputable barrister who applies for silk should receive it as a matter of course. If he is making a mistake, and over-estimating his chance, that is his own risk: let him take the responsibility. There is something invidious in leaving to the Lord Chancellor the thankless task of distinguishing between the merits of those juniors who deem themselves fitted for a forensic career within the bar. Against this, of course, it may be urged with force that it is essential to preserve the dignity of the full-bottomed wig; but, on the whole, the balance of advantage is against the preservation of any unnecessary monopoly.

Registration of Deeds in Yorkshire.

THE LETTER which we printed last week (ante, p. 831) on the effect of the decision of the Court of Appeal in Manks v. Whiteley (1912, 1 Ch. 735) very usefully emphasizes the point that that decision does not touch the question of mortgages to secure a present advance and future advances, or, in another form, mortgages to secure current accounts. Both forms of mortgage are in use with bankers; the former when the current account is always required to be in credit, and the necessary cash is provided by advance of definite sums from time to time on a loan account; the latter, when the customer is allowed to overdraw his account, and the mortgage covers the current deficiency. The working of the Yorkshire registry in such cases is, our correspondent "F. J." shewed, quite simple. The essential point about the Yorkshire system is, that securities rank strictly in order of registration. A subsequent incumbrancer who registers first does not, as in Middlesex, lose his priority because he had actual notice of the first security. Moreover, the Yorkshire registry does away with the effect of the legal estate. In Middlesex a subsequent incumbrancer without notice who gets in the legal estate is entitled to the benefit of that estate as against an earlier registered equitable incumbrance. But the Yorkshire registry resembles the Middlesex registry in that registration is not notice. The operation of this last doctrine, however, is less extensive in Yorkshire than in Middlesex. In Yorkshire, as our correspondent pointed out, it is important with regard to mortgages of the kind referred to above. The original security covers the future advances, and these can be made as against a subsequent incumbrancer so long as the first mortgagee has no notice of the subsequent incumbrance. When he has notice he must stop making the advances. But registration of the subsequent incumbrance is not such notice, and hence the first mortgagee is not bound to search the register on the occasion of each fresh advance. This practice was upset by section 15 of the Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884, which made registration actual notice, but it was restored by the repeal of that section by the Yorkshire Registries Act, 1885.

The Duty to Search the Register.

THE PRACTICE of the Yorkshire registry as to mortgages to secure future advances is thus, as our correspondent "F. J." pointed out, sufficiently clear and simple. But if the original mortgage is not to secure further advances, then, of course, any further advance operates as an independent security, and if another incumbrance has been registered in the meantime, there are now three incumbrances, which rank in order of registration. To guard against this the first mortgagee's solicitor must search the register on the occasion of the further advance. Another correspondent, whose letter will be found elsewhere, questions whether there is any substance in the point about notice, since the incumbrancer who registers first has the benefit of his earlier registration, and need not trouble himself whether this is notice to a subsequent incumbrancer or not. In the great majority of cases this is so, and hence, as just observed, it is the duty of the solicitor in a register county, acting for an intending mortgagee or purchaser, to search the register, and no doubt, if he omitted to do so, he would be liable for any loss thus resulting. But, as also pointed out, he need not search, either in Yorkshire or Middlesex, on the occasion of a further advance under a registered mortgage to secure such advance; and in Middlesex he will escape the effect of not searching if his client obtains the legal estate. This, however, is mere good luck; it is not a reason for omitting to search. In practice it is the duty of a solicitor in both counties to make the usual search in the register, save only in the case of a further advance under a security which covers it.

The Suggested Extension of Registration of Deeds.

SHOULD THERE be any extension of this system of registration in accordance with the suggestion made by Mr. RUBINSTEIN at the recent meeting of the Law Society—a suggestion enforced by the letter from Mr. YOUNG which we print elsewhere—it will have to be considered which system, that of Yorkshire or that of Middlesex, is to prevail. Although the Middlesex system, in depriving a subsequent incumbrancer who registers first of his priority when he has actual notice, is based on a clear principle of equity, yet it infringes on the efficacy of registration, and doubtless the Yorkshire system, which is also the shipping system, would be preferred. The efficacy still given in Middlesex to the legal estate is of course a mere survival which in principle cannot be justified. We may add that in Manks v. Whiteley (1912, 1 Ch. 735) the question of notice was not material. If, as might possibly have been held, FARRAR, the new mortgagee, stepped into the shoes of ACKROYD, the original first mortgagee, it was immaterial whether or not he had notice of MANKS'S change; if he did not, then he was, both on the register, and in fact, subsequent to MANKS. At least this seems to be the result of a somewhat complicated set of facts.

The New County Court Rules.

THE new County Court Rules, which were signed by the Lord Chancellor on the 26th of July, and came into force on the 30th of September, are forty-two in number, and make somewhat extensive alterations in the details of county court procedure. Each rule is numbered as if it were a part of the general rules remodelled in 1903, and an alternative mode of citation is offered; it may either be quoted as if it were a new rule, or as if it were a part of the old order to which it is attached. The result of the alterations, added to those made from time to time since 1903, is that the county court code of procedure is quite as detailed, elaborate, and complicated as that which governs a High Court action. It is, nowadays, in any action where more than a few shillings are involved, as impossible for the layman to thread his way safely through the maze of technicalities, unaided by a trained legal adviser, as it is when he seeks the arbitrament of a High Court judgment. If, in the pride of his heart, he attempts to do so, he probably will name wrongly the parties in his plaint-note, omit to give the necessary particulars when he serves it, overlook the notices he has to give, and bar himself from raising some equitable point which requires to be specifically notified to the other side. If, after much delay, amendment, and the throwing away of costs he ought to get, he finally secures a decision in his favour, the chances are that he will get judgment signed in some erroneous and futile form. Just as the abolition of the old system of pleadings, by the Judicature Act of 1873, did not really assist the client in person to fight as his own champion in the High Court, but only rendered necessary a novel style of legal draftmanship, so the gradual evolution of county court procedure has long ago defeated the aim of its founder, the Lord BROUGHAM of pre-reform days, who aimed at making litigation so simple that any ploughman or charwoman could conduct his or her own case in the newly created small debt courts.

The present fasciculus of new rules, like the "All Gaul" of Cæsar's Commentaries, may be conveniently divided into three parts. First of all, we have mere "routine" rules; those which effect some small change in the time or mode of taking the various legal steps in the action, not because any hardship is thereby removed, but simply for some ground of real or fancied convenience in the transaction of court business. Such changes require to be noted by the process-clerk in a firm who do county court work, but otherwise have no legal significance. Secondly, there are a number of "formal" rules, or alterations in existing orders, intended to achieve verbal consistency by amending the language of some old provision which recent legislation or judicial decision has made obsolete or inapt. Such rules as these, again, are of no practical importance, but they help to avoid confusion, and are necessary in order to escape from slovenly inaccuracy in the system of legal reference. Lastly, there is a group of what may be called "remedial" rules; these aim at doing away with some actual hardship or difficulty which has been shewn to exist in practice, as the result of imperfections in existing modes of process. Changes of this kind have a real utility and importance, though in many cases they are necessarily experimental, and after trial are abandoned again. Thus Rules 4 and 5, which relate to the naming of defendants on plaint-notes, restore an old practice which was tentatively abolished by a rule of 1910.

"Routine" rules, as we may call the first class, are on the whole the predominant partner in the new changes, and since they defy logical classification, we will summarize them merely in numerical order. Rule 1 provides that any searches which may be necessary before entering up judgment on a default summons may be made on any day in which the registrar's office is open. Rules 6 and 9 provide that when a married woman or a widow is a defendant, the particulars and the præcipe for judgment by default shall state—both in cases of contract and in cases of tort—whether she is sued in respect of some liability arising before, during, or after coverture. The object of this, of course, is to facilitate the entering of judgment in the proper form, which varies in at least six ways according to the exact status of the woman and the character of the liability. Rule 13 directs that a notice of claim to contribution (by defendant against a third party), shall be filed for the use of the court as well as served on the third party. Rules 22 and 24 provide the course of procedure to be followed when the certified copy of a judgment by one court is to be used when a judgment summons is taken out in another court, where the parties reside in different districts; and Rule 24 adds some further provisions when, after receipt of the certified copy of the court having jurisdiction over his new residence, the debtor removes to still another area. Rule 27 amends the form of affidavit required for the issue of a garnishee summons. Rule 29 enacts that in the case of remitted actions (sent by High Court to county court), exceeding £50, the times for the various interlocutory proceedings shall be the same as if an action for a sum exceeding £50 had been originally commenced in the county court—an obvious piece of common-sense. Rule 31 prescribes procedure to be adopted in Admiralty proceedings when property has to be appraised for purposes of salvage, and Rule 33 directs the payment of travelling expenses of assessors in Admiralty actions. Rule 39 alters the scales of costs in some small details; Rule 41 provides for service on a party's solicitor of notices sent by the registrar or high bailiff; and Rule 42 alters the computation of time for the service of notices by saying that it is to include Sundays and days on which the offices are closed. Most of the foregoing rules really only sanction practices already tacitly adopted in a great many courts, but the last rule—as to the computation of time—is important and should be noticed.

It is not necessary to deal other than briefly with our second group of rules, those which make purely "formal" changes. The passing of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, made various references in the old rules obsolete, and these are corrected by Rules 2, 3, 7, 34 and 35. Rule 8 puts an end to a verbal discrepancy which existed between Order VII., Rule 29a and Order VII., Rule 33; while Rules 10 and 11 alter forms 75 and 76, so as to bring them into conformity with the rules. A similar alteration is made by Rules 14, 15 and 16; while Rules

17, 18 and 19 are intended to make clear the liability of a juror summoned for a particular day to be fined for non-attendance on a subsequent day to which the action he is trying has been adjourned. Rules 28, 32, 35 and 40 are necessary to ensure verbal consistency; and Rules 36, 37 and 38 in order to correct references in the old rules: the necessity for such correction is the result of the passing into law of the Open Spaces Act, 1906 (a consolidating statute), and the Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910.

Our third group of new rules, those which are in a true sense "remedial," is not by any means a large one. The requirement of Order V, Rule 13 (12), and Rule 15, that when a defendant is sued out of the jurisdiction his full name must be given, led to hardship in very many cases, since creditors seldom know more than the surnames of their debtors; Rules 4 and 5 provide that, instead of his full name, his occupation only need be stated. The requirement as to occupation is, of course, intended to prevent a domestic servant or manual labourer (who are exempt from this process, being improperly included in a plaint-note issued from a jurisdiction in which they do not reside. Again, in practice some difficulty was created by the necessity of obtaining the approval of the court to the settlement of actions in which infants are concerned; this rule was really intended only to meet cases in which the infant was a beneficiary in equity or the victim of a tort; it was never necessary when the legal infant is, in fact, an employee suing in his own right in respect of work done, under section 96 of the County Court Act, 1888. Rule 12 removes the necessity of obtaining such approval in the latter class of cases. Another hardship that existed under the old rules was the rigid and universal character of the provision that judgment recovered against a defendant is automatically stayed in the county court for fourteen days. This was intended to give poor debtors a breathing space in which to find the money with which to pay their debts; but in the case of "special" judgments—e.g., an order for restitution of the property detained in a detinue action—no reason for its existence can be advanced. Rule 20 removes this hardship in the case of "special" as distinct from "ordinary" judgments; and Rule 21 enables a creditor to obtain payment of money at an earlier date than fourteen days after judgment, if he can shew that the debtor is removing his goods to avoid execution. These three substantive alterations, one intended to assist the creditor whose debtor incurs liability in one jurisdiction and then removes to another, a second intended to facilitate the compromise of actions brought by minors, and a third removing an unnecessary obstacle in the way of enforcing judgments, appear to be the only definitely remedial improvements which are to be found in the whole of the forty-two new rules. The moral seems to be that, in the county court as elsewhere, routine and formalism are elements which, of necessity, bulk more largely in judicial machinery than does the removal of essential grievances.

The Annual Practice.

THE ANNUAL PRACTICE, 1913, BEING A COLLECTION OF THE STATUTES, ORDERS AND RULES RELATING TO THE GENERAL PRACTICE, PROCEDURE AND JURISDICTION OF THE SUPREME COURT. WITH NOTES, FORMS, &c. By J. B. MATTHEWS, BARRISTER-AT-LAW; RICHARD WHITE, a Master of the Supreme Court, and FRANCIS A. STRINGER, of the Central Office, Royal Courts of Justice. Sweet & Maxwell (Limited); Stevens & Son (Limited).

The new edition of the Annual Practice, which is issued with creditable promptitude at the commencement of the legal year, appears for the first time in one volume. This, it is stated in the preface, has been accomplished partly by the revision and condensation which have been proceeding for several years past, and partly by the omission of some portion, such as the Revenue Practice, the Judicial Trustee Act and Rules (which for practical purposes, it is said, doubtless with truth, have been superseded by the Public Trustee Act and Rules), and the Judicial Committee Rules. These portions shew no material change from year to year; but there has, apparently, been no omission of the parts of the book which are of every-day practical use, and the additions and alterations to the R. S. C. which have been made during the past year have been duly incorporated. These include the R. S. C. (February), 1912, which adds sub-section (b) to Ord. 55, r. 13, and applies the procedure relating to vesting orders under the Trustee Act, 1893, to the Lunacy Acts, 1890 and 1911; the new set of Public Trustee Rules, which have taken the place of those of 1907; and the R. S. C. of May and July last, which make several changes in matters of detail. Thus, the decision of the Court of Appeal, in Slingsby v. Slingsby (1912, 2 Ch. 21), shewed that, in an action to perpetuate testimony in order to establish a title to land, the whole subject-matter of the action was not land so as to enable a writ to be served out of the jurisdiction under Ord. 11, r. 1 (a), and the paragraph has been enlarged to give the necessary power; and Ord. 63, r. 6, has been altered so as to include the day appointed for keeping the King's birthday in the holidays of the offices of the Supreme Court. The editing of various parts of the work has been entrusted, as before, to writers specially conversant with the subjects; thus, Mr. Blake Odgers, K.C., deals with the pleading orders; Judge Bray with discovery; Master King with costs; and Mr. A. Cordery with solicitors. The work, in its present form, makes a portly volume, and we are not sure that even with compression, two volumes are not preferable.

Land Transfer.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.]

Sir,—To those who, like Mr. Rubinstein, were sanguine enough to look to the members of the legal profession for support in his campaign against the extension of the registration of title to land, the lukewarm reception given to his able paper on "The Land Transfer Problem" at the recent provincial meeting of the Law Society is very disquieting.

Instead of again shelving the question—for that is what the amendment adopted at the meeting would seem to amount to—surely it would have been wiser to have made it the leading topic for discussion.

It should, however, be noticed that the opposition to the free discussion of Mr. Rubinstein's motion emanated chiefly from country practitioners who, not being affected by the Land Registry Acts, cannot have the faintest conception of the supreme muddle into which a large number of titles are thrown once they get entangled in the closely woven meshes of the compulsory registration net.

Mr. Rubinstein, like all his professional brethren in London who have extensive dealings with registered land, is, however, fully aware of the endless difficulties which these Acts introduce into simple everyday conveyancing transactions. Hence his uncompromising and strenuous hostility to the pragmatism set up by this compulsory system.

The thirteen years during which the Act of 1897 has been in operation, and the adoption of various expedients to make it popular and workable, have given London solicitors ample opportunity of judging whether the Act does really cheapen and simplify the transfer of land. They have, however, come to a contrary conclusion, and I think there is abundant justification for their so doing. Notwithstanding, they have been compelled to submit to, and make the best of, the clumsy and cast-iron procedure established by the Rules, the carrying out of which has obliged them to resort to deeds outside the register, and to adopt other precautions, without which they would have been unable to obtain for their clients that complete security of title which the Land Transfer Acts should, but do not, give.

This dual system consequently gives rise to great confusion where simplicity once prevailed. Indeed, confusion must always be the inevitable outcome of a system that is not, and can never be, an exact mirror of the title—the one essential of any perfect system of registration, which, strange to say, the 1897 Act was apparently designed to prevent. Moreover, this expensive compulsory system does not afford the same protection against fraud as an improved system of registration of deeds such as that advocated by Mr. Rubinstein would give.

Registration of deeds can, as is well known, be effected with but little trouble and expense, but dealings with registered titles under the compulsory system are extremely costly and troublesome, as the following instance, which recently came under my notice, will clearly shew.

The survivor of three mortgagees wished to transfer a registered charge, which was created by a proprietor who had since died, the transferees desiring a variation in the terms of the security.

The documentary and other evidence required by the Land Registry was as follows:—

(1) An elaborate instrument of transfer of charge which had to be submitted to the Registrar for approval.

(2) A transfer of the equity from the surviving non-proving executor of the deceased proprietor's will to the trustees thereof.

(3) A certificate of the death of one of the executors.

(4) A certified copy of the act of probate of the will of the other executor who died abroad.

(5) A declaration by the non-proving executor accepting the trusts of the will.

(6) A statement proving exemption from ad valorem stamp duty.

(7) A copy of the instrument of transfer of charge.

(8) A certificate as to the value of the land, and

(9) Evidence of payment of estate duty.

The fees and extra costs incurred by reason of the land being on the register were as follows:—

Registry fees	10	0	0
Certificate of death	3	7
Office copy probate act	12	0
Stamp	10	0
Total	16	5	7

Now let me compare the procedure when the title is not registered.

Assuming the solicitor acts for all parties, as in the present example, the only document required would be a transfer of the mortgage in which all necessary parties would concur. The only outgoings payable would be:—

Stamp duty	15	0
Fees for registry in Middlesex	7	6
Total	1	2	6

It will thus be seen that the extra expense to the client, entailed by reason of the fact that the land was on the register, amounted to upwards of £15 over and above what he would have had to pay had the land been unregistered.

This is by no means an isolated case. Similar instances occur daily. Surely it is not a question of extending such a costly system as this, and the amendments proposed by the Royal Commission would only aggravate the evil. Abolition would therefore seem to be the only solution.

H. L. EWENS.

Highview, Old Malden, Surrey, Oct. 1.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.]

Sir,—In your paper of the 3rd of April, 1897, there is a letter from me suggesting the extension of the system of registration of deeds practised in Middlesex and Yorkshire, and also in Scotland.

The following editorial comment was appended to the letter, viz.:—"At the present juncture the question of a register of assurances in England is not of practical importance, though our correspondent's account of the system in Scotland will be read with interest."

You adhere to this opinion in your paper of the 28th of September.

The suggestion of a register of deeds has again been made in the papers read by Mr. Rubinstein and Mr. Boyd Anderson before the Law Society. When these papers are read in connection with the report by the Royal Commission on Registration of Title in Scotland, dated the 25th of July, 1910, the following train of reasoning naturally occurs. The recommendation made by the majority of the Commissioners is, in substance, that the experiment of registration of title should be tried in Scotland in an urban district, so that if found to work well it might be further extended. The Commissioners base their recommendation upon the fact that there exists in Scotland a search sheet, which shews in a ledgerized form the state of the title of all properties in Scotland during the last forty years, and that this search sheet would tend to simplify the obvious difficulties of first registration of old existing properties. There is also no need, as in England, to organize a new department. The department, the premises, and the staff (to a great extent trained) are ready to hand. It is obvious, therefore, that it is better to try the experiment of registration of title in Scotland than in England. In the meantime registration of deeds, as proposed by Mr. Rubinstein, could be adopted in England during a period of, say, twenty years, and a search sheet could be built up concurrently with registration during that period. At the same time an Act of Parliament could be passed introducing a twenty years' absolute prescription of title. At the end of that period of twenty years the materials would be all in existence for setting up a system of registration of absolute title. England would then also have the benefit of the experiment in Scotland. If the system of registration of title had been weighed in the balance in Scotland, and had been found wanting, so that its adoption in England was not desirable, the system of registration of deeds could go on.

There is no doubt that the extension of registration of deeds to the whole of England would entail expense, but that expense need not be excessive. There exist already the department and the staff in London which would be available for the work. All that would be necessary would be to open separate sets of books for the different counties in England, or for larger areas, if thought more convenient. The existing registries in Yorkshire and Middlesex could either remain as they are or be transferred to the general registry.

Registration of Deeds.

To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal and Weekly Reporter.]

Sir,—The letter of "F. J." in your number of the 5th inst., on the case Manks v. Whiteley, in which the question of constructive notice is referred to, reminds me that some years ago I had to deal with that question, when it was decided by the Court of Appeal, following strong cases on the subject, that constructive notice does not apply in a register county and that only actual notice is effective. While writing, I should like to elicit something on the point that registration of a deed is not notice of it. Very well, but if a registered deed takes priority over one not registered, surely that is as good as notice, if not better. Therefore, what is there in the point that registering a deed is not giving notice of it? In a registered county, is not a purchaser's solicitor bound to search the register? and would he not be liable for negligence if he did not, and damage arose through the neglect to do so?

Bristol Incorporated Law Society.

The following are extracts from the report of the council:—

Legal Education.—The grant of £150 from the Law Society has again been made for this purpose in Bristol. The number of courses of lectures was as follows:—Six for senior students by Mr. A. M. Wilshire, namely, three on Equity (mortgages, specific performance and administration of assets), and three on Common Law (bills of exchange and torts); and a similar number by Mr. C. A. Chilton for senior and junior students on "The Social Economy of the Realm," "Common Law Practice," "Evidence," "Real and Personal Property," "Ecclesiastical Law," and "Preparation of Documents." The total number of students attending these lectures was twenty-three, being six less than last year. The report of the lecturers, while satisfactory in regard to those students who attend the lectures, is not so in respect of the numbers who the lecturers think should enter for them. The council would urge upon principals and articulated clerks the extreme desirability of joining these very useful lectures, and of punctual and regular attendance thereat. They regret to learn that the latter do not attend in greater numbers and take part in the debates of the Law Students' Society, and they suggest that members of this society should use their influence with their articulated clerks to remedy this condition of affairs. During the year sixteen articulated clerks from Bristol passed the examinations of the Law Society, of whom nine passed the final examination and seven both the legal and book-keeping portions of the intermediate examination. Of the former Mr. J. D. P. G. Bateman, articulated to Mr. Rogers Ford, and Mr. J. G. Heal, articulated to Mr. G. A. T. Tuckey, obtained third class honours, and were accordingly each awarded by this society a prize of £3 3s. in books.

Collection of Debts, Rents, and Interest by Solicitors on Commission.—This is a matter which is still engaging the attention of the council of the Law Society, who issued a letter of enquiry to the provincial law societies asking for information as to the practice in their respective districts and for their opinion on the subject generally. In reply, the council of this society, after supplying the information asked for so far as this district is concerned, went on to express the opinion that on the subject as a whole the council are strongly of opinion that this practice of payment by commission which prevails generally in the West of England is one to which no reasonable exception can be taken. It has been in existence many years, is one with which the commercial community is well satisfied, and this council sees every reason why it should be continued.

Auction Fees.—During the past year the council thought it advisable to pass and circulate among the profession in Bristol the following resolution:—"That this council observes with regret that the fees charged in some recent sales by auction were very largely in excess of the scale commonly charged and of the scale settled between the principal auctioneers in this city and this society in 1882, and they deprecate such heavy fees being charged against purchasers at auction," and they consider this scale should not be exceeded whether the society's public sale conditions are used or not.

Use of this Society's Public Sale Conditions in Gloucestershire.—As the result of a correspondence between this council and the committee of the Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Incorporated Law Society, an understanding has been come to that in respect of sales of properties between Thornbury and Chipping Sodbury and Bristol it is legitimate to use this society's conditions of sale, but that otherwise the conditions of sale of the Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Society should be used. It is hoped that this arrangement will be universally observed in future.

Council of the Law Society.—Mr. F. Sturge's term of office as an extraordinary member having expired, Mr. C. E. Barry has been nominated to succeed him. The council regret to have to report the deaths during the year of Mr. Thomas Dix Sibly, who was a member of the council for several years and president of the society in the year 1898-9, and of Mr. J. B. C. Burroughs, also a former member of the council. The members of the council retiring by rotation are Mr. L. C. Danger, Mr. C. F. L. Clarke and Mr. F. E. Metcalfe. In pursuance of the power given them by the 4th article of association the council nominate Mr. C. F. L. Clarke for re-election.

In recognition of many years' service as joint honorary secretaries, Messrs. J. N. C. Pope and Francis Sturge have been respectively presented with a silver salver and decanter and a gold repeater watch and chain, these gifts having been subscribed for by various members of the society.

United Law Society.

The first meeting this session will be held on Monday, the 14th of October, at 7.30, in the Inner Temple Lecture Hall, 3, King's Bench Walk. The subject for debate will be "That this house condemns the foreign policy of the Government." Opener, Mr. Thos. Hynes; opposer, Mr. J. W. Weigall. Any inquiries as to the society should be addressed to the hon. sec., Mr. A. T. Settle, 1, Pump Court, Temple, E.C.

Solicitors' Benevolent Association.

The usual monthly meeting of the board of directors of the above association was held at the Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane, London, on the 9th inst., Mr. R. S. Taylor in the chair, the other directors present being Sir Henry J. Johnson and Messrs. W. C. Blandy (Reading), S. P. B. Bucknill, T. S. Curtis, A. Davenport, W. Dowson, H. Fulton (Salisbury), W. E. Gillett, Charles Goddard, J. R. B. Gregory, and W. Melmoth Walters. A sum of £145 was distributed in grants of relief, nine new members were admitted, and other general business transacted.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.—Oct. 2.—Chairman, Mr. W. S. Jones.—The subject for debate was: "That the case of Re Bradley and the Essex and Suffolk Accident Indemnity Society (1912, 1 K. B. 415) was wrongly decided (Insurance—Accident—Compensation to injured workman—Condition as to keeping proper wages book—Whether condition precedent—Right of insured to recover)." Mr. F. W. Chamberlain opened in the affirmative, Mr. Kafka seconded in the affirmative; Mr. A. R. N. Powys opened in the negative. The following members continued the debate:—Messrs. C. P. Blackwell, H. K. Turner, E. D. Shearn, W. Pleadwell, C. H. Woolrych, G. E. Shrimpton, and W. H. Parry. The motion was carried by 13 votes.

General.

Sir Thomas Hewitt, K.C., in reply to the unanimous invitation of the Borough Council, has consented to be nominated on 9th of November for the position of Mayor of Kensington.

Mr. Octavius Leigh Leigh-Clare, of Scholar Green, Cheshire, Vice-Chancellor of the County Palatine of Lancaster, who died on 16th of July, aged 71, left estate valued at £3,045 gross, with net personalty £1,572.

At Westminster on Tuesday an inquiry was held concerning the death of Joseph Coatsworth, aged 62, a barrister, who was found dead on Friday morning in his chambers, New-court, Carey-street, W.C. Dr. Bremmer, of Drury-lane, said death was due to an aneurism of the heart. It was a rare case, there being three aneurisms in one. The jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

Mr. Henry Joseph Toulmin completed fifty years as a Justice of the Peace for the County of Hertford last Saturday, and at the sitting of the St. Albans Divisional Court announced that on account of deafness brought about by a gun accident some years ago, he would retire from regular attendance. Mr. Walter Reynolds, the presiding magistrate, and Lord Verulam, on behalf of the other magistrates, congratulated Mr. Toulmin on his jubilee, and expressed regret at his retirement. Mr. Toulmin is also a Justice of the Peace for the City of St. Albans, and last year he celebrated his jubilee as a member of the St. Albans Board of Guardians. He has been four times mayor of St. Albans.

The vigorous protest, says the Globe, made by the President of the Law Society to the growth of counsel's fees has resulted in some delightfully exaggerated statements as to the earnings of the Bar. What is the average income of the 10,000 barristers whose names are on the "Law List"? Lord Robson, when presiding, as Attorney-General, at the annual meeting of the Barristers' Benevolent Association two or three years ago, referred not unsympathetically to a calculation that the average earnings of the members of the Bar did not exceed £78 a year. All the barristers, however, who appear in the "Law List" do not appear in the courts. Sir Robert Finlay, speaking at another meeting of the same association, estimated that "something like 2,000 members of the Bar were practising in the sense that they either got work or were putting themselves in the way of getting it." If this estimate be accepted, the average earnings of the practising members of the Bar are £390 a year. They seem scarcely large enough to excite the wrath of a prosperous City solicitor.

At Bow County Court on Monday, says the Times, His Honour Judge Smyly delivered a reserved judgment in the action of Reef v. the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway Company, which raised a question as to the liability of the defendants with regard to passengers' luggage. On 5th of December last the plaintiff alighted at the East Ham Station at 6.45 a.m. and told a platform inspector that he wanted a porter to take his luggage, including a valuable kit-bag, weighing 90lb., both understanding that this meant it should be conveyed to his house. Nothing was said as to this being done at the plaintiff's own risk, and the porter placed the luggage on a truck, which he left outside the porters' room whilst he attended to a milk train. When the porter returned the bag had disappeared. His Honour said it appeared that the company permitted its porters to deliver or collect luggage at a remuneration of 3d. per package, or as much more as they could get for the services rendered. The money paid was allowed to go to the porters, and although they were not compelled to do it, the work was willingly done, as the sums received formed a substantial addition to their wages. In his Honour's opinion, the company were estopped from denying that they were carriers of the kit-bag for reward. It was clear that the porter acted by the company's permission and that the company had actually arranged a scheme of payment for such purposes. The kit-bag was taken by the porter as a servant of the company. For the same reason the defendants were estopped from denying that the kit-bag was entrusted to their servant. It was lost by the negligence of the porter. The case was very different from those in which porters were asked to take care of luggage simply to save passengers trouble. The fact that the company allowed their porters to collect and deliver luggage formed a great distinction between the cases which had been cited. There would be judgment for the plaintiff for £21 and costs. A stay of execution was granted on payment into court.

A movement has been started in Watford to assert an alleged right-of-way over a footpath which crosses Oxhey golf links and leads to Oxhey woods. The matter has been before the Watford Rural District Council, and after a meeting of ratepayers on Sunday afternoon a small crowd assembled on Watford Heath to take part in a procession over the disputed path. A notice handed to each of the demonstrators read:—"Please do not walk over the paths more than two abreast. Avoid doing damage to the golf links. Do not interfere with the notice boards." Mr. T. Moffet, the organizer of the demonstration, led the way. A notice board with the words, "No footpath," was pulled up by one of the crowd, and laid by the side of the path. The leaders were ultimately accosted by the secretary of the golf club and another official, and their names and addresses were taken. The procession then went as far as the gate where the path goes to Oxhey woods. Mr. Moffet congratulated those present on the orderly manner in which public rights had been asserted.

At North London, on Wednesday, says the Times, Ernest Peel, otherwise E. M. Keeble and Co., of 32, High-street, Kingsland, was summoned at the instance of the Law Society for falsely pretending to be a solicitor on 6th of May last. He was further similarly summoned, the date being 24th of September. Mr. Robert Humphreys represented the Law Society, and Mr. E. M. Moore the defendant. Proceeding upon the first summons, Mr. Humphreys said it was one of the worst cases the Law Society had ever had before them. A woman advertised some laundry machinery for sale, and was seen by a man about purchasing it. He gave her, as a reference, the name of Messrs. Keeble & Co., solicitors, 33, High-street, Kingsland. Through her solicitor the woman applied to Keeble & Co. about the reference, and as a result she parted with her machinery to the man. An action in the High Court ensued, and Keeble & Co., acting for the man, obtained a verdict. When she was given a satisfactory character about the man, which was on 6th of May, there was no Keeble & Co., Mr. Keeble having died in the previous November. The defendant had been his managing clerk. The man who had been given a good character was a convict. Mr. Moore, addressing Mr. D'Eyncourt in mitigation, said that for some years the defendant had acted as managing clerk to Mr. Keeble, and when he died last November Peel was anxious to keep the business connexion together until a successor was found. With regard to the second summons, Mr. Humphreys said it related to a brass plate fixed to the outside of 33, High-street, Kingsland, on which was "E. Keeble & Co., solicitors." It was the defendant who was carrying on business as Keeble & Co., solicitors. Mr. D'Eyncourt said he considered the maximum penalty of £10 under the section an extremely light one. On the first summons he fined defendant £10 and costs, £3 5s., and on the second summons a similar fine was imposed, and costs £1 1s.; in default of distress, two months. The money was paid.

TO THE PROFESSION.

Messrs. Athertons, Limited, claim the patronage of the LEGAL PROFESSION in all matters relating to "Transfer of Practices," arrangement of Partnerships, with or without a view to Succession, Providing Capital on suitable security, and every branch of the actual business side of the Profession, requiring the assistance of the "Third Party," on the following grounds:—

TRANSFER AND SALE (1) They have a large and experienced staff versed in every detail of transfer and sale of practices.

(2) They have at all times on their books a number of gentlemen fully qualified, who are waiting to purchase practices outright;

SUCCESSION A considerable number willing to enter into partnership, with or without a view to "SUCCESSION"; Some extremely valuable Practices for disposal and Partnerships open.

MANAGING CLERKS They can supply at a moment's notice responsible clerks and admitted Solicitors prepared to act as Managing Clerks, and they keep a Register of Law Clerks of every description open to accept employment.

FINANCE (3) They are prepared to introduce capital for almost any reasonable proposition, arrange mortgages, advances on reversions, or purchase same outright; obtain underwriting for small or large Limited Company flotations; and they particularly invite correspondence in connection with Finance on matters where ordinary channels have failed.

(4) They are located in the most convenient centre of the Legal World, and appointments can be arranged for solicitors to meet clients at their office if desirable.

(5) Their clients can rely upon the strictest confidence being observed, as all correspondence is dealt with in the first instance by the Principal ONLY.

The foregoing are only some few of the advantages ATHERTONS' Legal Profession Service offer, and they cordially invite the reader of this brief outline of the "CASE" for Athertons to weigh the points adduced carefully, place them upon their trial, and they are confident that the "Verdict" will be in their favour.

Selected List of

PITMAN'S BOOKS FOR SOLICITORS.

THE LAW OF REPAIRS AND DILAPIDATIONS

By T. CATO WORSFOLD, M.A., LL.D. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. net.

"The work is a really first-class little treatise. The subject matters dealt with are stated in a clear, concise, and masterly manner, and that it will be found to have a considerable future before it admits of no doubt. We congratulate the learned author upon his efforts, which we are sure will meet with approval in and out of the profession."—The Law Students' Journal.

THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

By W. NEMBARD HIBBERT, LL.D. (Lond.).

Barrister-at-Law of the Middle Temple; sometime Dean of the Faculty of Laws, University of London; Lecturer on Evidence, Jurisprudence, and Private International Law at King's College, University of London. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. net.

The Law Students' Journal says:—

"The gentleman responsible for it has considered, from his experience with students, that there is a place for a work on the law of evidence written in simple and colloquial language, and as free from technical terms as possible, and in this we agree with him. We go still further, and say that we think this little book will well supply the want."

PITMAN'S GUIDE TO THE LAW OF LICENSING

By J. WELLS THATCHER, Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 300 pp., 5s. net.

The various subjects are treated in alphabetical order, and will be found easy for instant reference. The alphabetical arrangement of the titles will be of service to the trained minds of the legal profession, for it gives a short and accurate summary of each subject of the law of licensing, and will often save the practising lawyer the necessity of consulting, at too great length, the larger earned works on the subject.
